

...the ...
...the ...

...the ...
...the ...

...the ...
...the ...

Help the campaign against faith schools today!

...the ...
...the ...

...the ...
...the ...

...the ...
...the ...

...the ...

SOCIALISM

...the ...
...the ...

SOCIALIST STUDIES

...the ...
...the ...

...the ...
...the ...

- ...the ...
- ...the ...
- ...the ...

STAY IN TOUCH!

THE HUMANIST
MAY/JUNE 2006
ISSUE 106
PAGES 1-10
ISSN 0013-758X
WWW.HUMANISTMAGAZINE.COM

SUBSCRIBE
NOW
$12.00
PER YEAR

KEEP MAKING SENSE

DURING THE PAST FEW YEARS, the world has been rocked by a series of events that have challenged our understanding of reality. From the 9/11 attacks to the Iraq War, from the discovery of the Higgs boson to the global financial crisis, we have been faced with a series of events that have defied our expectations and challenged our assumptions. In this article, we explore the ways in which these events have shaped our collective consciousness and the ways in which we have sought to make sense of them. We look at the ways in which we have turned to religion, philosophy, and science to help us understand the world around us, and we consider the ways in which these different approaches have both helped and hindered us in our quest for meaning. We also look at the ways in which we have sought to create a new narrative, a new story that can help us make sense of the world as it is, and we consider the ways in which this narrative has both helped and hindered us in our quest for meaning.

As we look back on the past few years, it is clear that we have been through a period of great upheaval and change. The world has been rocked by a series of events that have challenged our understanding of reality, and we have been forced to re-examine our assumptions and our beliefs. In this article, we explore the ways in which these events have shaped our collective consciousness and the ways in which we have sought to make sense of them. We look at the ways in which we have turned to religion, philosophy, and science to help us understand the world around us, and we consider the ways in which these different approaches have both helped and hindered us in our quest for meaning. We also look at the ways in which we have sought to create a new narrative, a new story that can help us make sense of the world as it is, and we consider the ways in which this narrative has both helped and hindered us in our quest for meaning.

THE HUMANIST
MAY/JUNE 2006
ISSUE 106
PAGES 1-10
ISSN 0013-758X
WWW.HUMANISTMAGAZINE.COM